Dear Ruby Catherine,

Thank you for your mail. I continue my commitment to making the Journal of Physical Chemistry and Biophysics a successful endeavor. The impact factor of 0.75 is good regarding the relatively short time of the journal's existence. There are a number of issues to be addressed to increase the journal's reputation and impact. Currently there is skepticism in the scientific community about the publishing policies of OMICS journals as well as about the multitude of advertisements of scientific meetings that probably never take place. Many people believe these journals are concerned more about collecting the publication fees than publishing high quality work. The review process is evidently not a stringent one, possibly allowing publication of scientifically flawed manuscripts. I believe these are important issues that can be and should be addressed to make our journal a real, well respected forum for high quality publications. There is also a need to make the journals Indexed by PubMed, SCOPUS etc. Please let me know your thoughts. Thanks again.

Sincerely,
Suren Tatulian.
